A TRIP DOWN THE BEAUTIFUL AND HISTORIC STREAM. An Old Mansion-Port Conway and Port Royal-Personal Notes-

The Crops. pondence of the Richmond [Dispatch.] ON THE RAPPAHANNOCK, ?

July 28, 1887.

To the Richmond people, with rare exceptions, that part of Virginia bordering on the Rappahannock river be-tween Fredericksburg and the bay is terra incognita. The "exceptions are those whose good fortune it has been to dwell at some time in this quiet, goodly land, or else to seek relief from carking care by the restful trip down the Rappahannock. Our little party, in which both classes were represented, left Richmond by the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Poday. Nothing worthy of mention oc-curred except that at the Junction we had some difficulty with a belated tramp, who persisted in getting in front tives. of the engine and endeavoring to steal a ride for himself and a little boy whom he was leading. De time, we made quick connection, arriving at Fredericksburg at 1:38 and was given for inspecting the venerable turn, is said, as to the rich brown color of its waters to be singularly like th classic Tiber. In poetry they talk about the "tawny mane" of the Tiber, and I suppose young lovers on Gamble's Hill, under the harvest moon, may have some equally high-flows conception of the rushing "Jeems, to the fellow who to drink it unfiltered it is awfully muddy-"only this and nothing more." But I started to write about the Rappahannock. On the trip to Leeds two notable places were passed The first was a fine and curious old colonial mansion—Cleaves, It is at present the residence of Henry Byrd Lewis, Esq., and with its red-brick walls, quaint angles, and gloriously green sward, sloping down to the very bank of the river, formed a beauty of picture. Unfortunately no copy of Howa was at hand, but one of our antiquarian in his Miss Albaugh, Baltimore, while embroidered, decollette.

Miss Land, Baltimore, apricot cash-Howe had a very interesting account of this very mansion. It is in King and lace,

A little further down Port Conway, in King George, confronts Port Royal, in Caroline. Here (it is recalled) it was that the infatuated Booth, having wrought his dreadful deed, and fleeing for his life, crossed the river, and just up there in Caroline he was slain. The up there in Caronine he was sain. The river grows broader and more attractive as we proceed, but the supper-gonit is still more so. And it is a splendid sup-per, and splendidly served. A good night's rest, an enchanting breakfust, and a quiet spoke follow each other the succulent spot on his native heath, may be pardoned if he speaks of the "noble river" in terms of affection and somewhat at length, considering the heated term. But enough of this, There is wide spread complaint, as we the succession of the position of Commonwealth and to be called in, and the matter will be carried into the courts to settle the moving forward towards the erection of the high constable had to be called in, and the matter will be carried into the courts to settle the rights of possession of the respective their house.

A constant stream of cold soft water is thus obtained, and I was told that the flow was about 1,300 gallons hourly. From this point on the number of passengers was rapidly increased by delegates to the association. The prospects are good for a large attendance and a fine meeting. SOME ADDITIONAL FACTS ABOUT THE SURRY CASE. Desperate Encounter with a Thief-A Female Bigamist-Two Claimants for a Child.

[Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch.]

Petersburg, July 28, 1887.

Reuben Cole, the negro who was lynched at Surry Courthouse night be-fore last for an infamous assault committed upon Mrs. R. M. Savedge three weeks ago, was on that day indicted by the grand jury and arraigned in court for trial. Upon his arraignment he elected to be tried in the Circuit Court, which would have put his trial off until the 13th of November. This delay in the trial of a man believed to be guilty of the heinous offence charged against him caused a strong feeling of indignation, and steps were taken to visit summary punishment on the prisoner. The Court and county officials seemed to have been apprised of this state of feeling, and it was quietly ordered by the Court that Cole should be brought at once to the jail in this city for safekeeping, and to prevent any probable exhibition of vio-lence. It was supposed that the order of the Court for the removal of the prisoner would not become known to any one, and whether it did or not can-not be ascertained. Had the prisoner submitted to trial in the County Court, after indictment, it is not believed that he would have been disturbed unless some mild punishment had been inflicted upon him by the jury. The prison-er's own action in deferring his trial brought upon him the swift and terrible death that was meted to him. The sheriff had secretly arranged to start with the prisoner at 5 o'clock yester-day morning for Petersburg, accompanied by a strong guard, making the trip more secure by taking passage on

Cole is said to have begged pitcously for that mercy which he brutally de-nied his victim. His body hung for hours on the tree upon which it was drawn, and presented a hideous and ghastly spectacle. It was pierced by bullets, evidently fired into it to make sure of death. SUBBY DEMOCRATIC DELEGATES.
